AVSIZZLE

Graphic designer. Brand identity, print and editorial, risograph, and motion.

SELECTED WORK

Design that never quite sits still.

A Greek-American video editor and visual designer from the USA. Her BA is from Roger Williams University, where she studied Graphic Design and Visual Art and received two Excellence in Visual Arts Awards.

Her design practice runs on the same instincts as her art practice. Working across brand identity, print and editorial, risograph and motion, Ava believes static work should feel like it is moving, and moving work should have an analog element, almost like it passed through a machine that left something behind.

Civil

Civil's audience stretches across the country, and it is the largest, and perhaps only, skate franchise in Rhode Island. Known for their community work, unique approach and contests, the Rhody state would not be the same without Civil. I took on the task of fully rebranding Civil's identity, establishing an identifiable abbreviation of the company as their main identity logo and creating a cohesive color palette that matched each staple store. I designed comprehensive packaging, stationery material, web content, and actual products Civil would sell following their rebrand.

SLEEVE

SLEEVE is a vinyl record subscription service I conceived, branded and built out as a self-directed project in 2024. The idea, the name, the identity, the packaging and a full mock e-commerce site are all mine.

Subscribers get a curated record each month across three membership tiers: Virtuoso, Trailblazer and VIP. Each record ships in a reusable sleeve box designed to be kept and displayed, not flattened and recycled, and the boxes can be sent back when you are done listening so they return into circulation.

Risograph Posters

Early 2024 I began to experiment and create with the risograph. I designed several designs and made hundreds of prints with the risograph. I fell in love with the two color combination and the flexibility the riso allows. I showcased two different projects in May one being a manipulated image of my face and one being shape and vector based radial flowers.

Words I Used Vol 1

Each zine in words I used includes five poems following the theme of the zine. Vol 1 of the words I used series explores big concepts with familiar scenery. I chose poems that revolve around growing up, learning from life, and about finding who you are. I wanted the first in the series to feel welcoming and safe. Design wise, bright gradients were used a lot as well as patterns and pastel colors.

Words I Used Vol 2

For the second edition of the zine, I wanted to explore a cultural interest of mine which is the punk rock culture of the 90s. I researched the musical influence that sparked the punk movement that began in the 70s. The poems I curated for this selection are meant to reflect the designs in a non-traditional way. Exploring more harsh and anti-establishment designs made me want to know how youth will engage with these concepts paired with written poetry. Included in this project: half tones, bold colors, edgy symbols, harsh topics, stories of loss and love, trials and triumphs. The literal sense of grittiness is explored as well as poetic symbolism.

Words I Used Vol 3

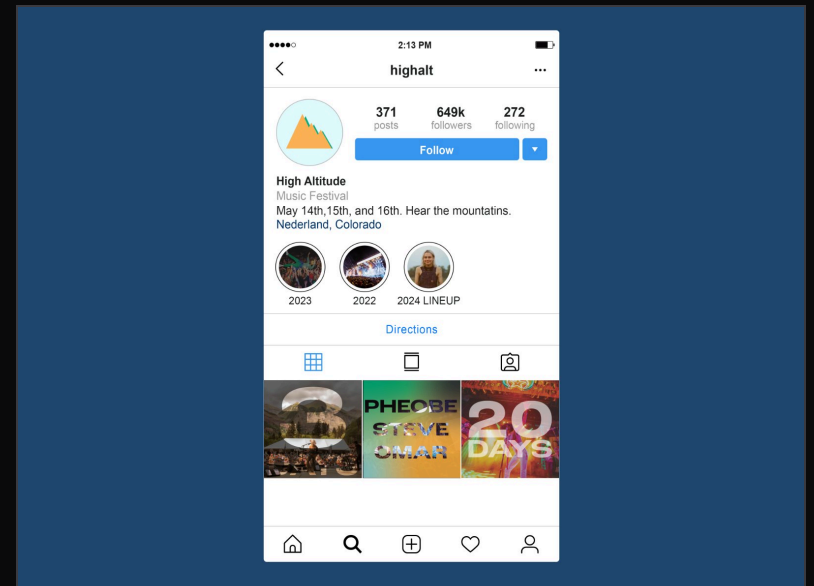

For Vol 3 I wanted to explore relationships and how we connect with each other in this world. By using symbols that reflect interconnectedness, I expressed these emotions and feelings with lots of spirals and loose imagery. The poems involve themes of who we are as people and how design connects us all. The title “contract” describes how human feelings and emotions are always changing.

High Alt

High Altitude is the hottest music festival. For this advanced design project, I was instructed to create and brand a mock music festival. I designed the festival logo and its advertisements, merchandise, and interface. High Altitude (High Alt for short) is the newest alternative music festival, with an emphasis on the 90's rock revival. High Alt's location in the high altitude of Nederland, Colorado creates a fitting atmosphere for music lovers from all over the world to enjoy. The bold and pastel bright color palette presented provides a smooth and refreshing feel that fits the vibe of the audience and talent. With influences from the Coachella Festival and Treefort Music Festival, I wanted to curate and design a unique yet realistic 3-day event. I branded every aspect of the festival including logo identity and color palette as well as map details, venue specifications and social media coverage.
